

Tilehurst is situated on high ground about three miles to the west of the town of Reading in the Royal County of Berkshire. In the 17th and 18th centuries Tilehurst covered a large area including Calcot, parts of Theale, Grovelands, The City, The Gutter, Little Heath, Kentwood Common, Tilehurst Common, Harmour and Northcott. In each of these areas were small clusters of dwellings separated by farms, open common land and woods. Many of these names are still in use today although the hamlet of Harmour is now known as Armour and Northcott has become Norcot. To the south of the hill on which Tilehurst stands runs the Bath Road, the main highway from London to Bath and to the North is the Oxford Road. The roads to Tilehurst were and still are uphill from whichever direction you approach – some quite steep.
